

Railway Deli

Continental Cafe

ONCE upon a time, two young brothers named Roland and Harry Griesser toiled in the kitchens of Austria, learning to cut meat and make pies and prepare pâtés and bake thick loaves of bread. One day they decided to move to Canada to work in restaurants. Eventually, armed with very sharp knives, broad shoulders, and Schwarzenegger accents, they settled in Canmore. And after five years operating the eponymous Griesser Spoon, they opened a new place on Railway Avenue.

There are two rooms to their new operation. The deli side is packed with all the cold cuts, condiments, and other take-away goodies you'll need for a weekend in Canmore. And the cafe is the place to go for a quick, high-quality meal. The boys roast chickens, slice prosciutto, and lay out a daily spread accessed via a high-tone cafeteria line. Slide your tray along, design your own sandwich to-go, tuck into a hot schnitzel at one of the fifty-five seats, or lounge over a late-morning breakfast. The food is fast, flavourful, and reasonably priced.

And meaty. The boys love their meat and have created a small side industry for Christmas and Thanksgiving turduckens—the deboned birds (turkeys, ducks, and chickens) stuffed inside each other.

And so goes the tale of the Griesser brothers.
